TERMS OF REFERENCE

I. Introduction

Violence against women and girls (VAWG) continues to be a widespread social problem in Bosnia and Herzegovina (BiH) and a serious violation of fundamental human rights. This type of violence is still tolerated and considered socially acceptable behavior, and is justified by traditional and patriarchal conceptions of the role and status of women in BiH society.

As a State Party to the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women (CEDAW), BiH has an obligation both to prevent VAWG and to provide support and redress for survivors of violence. In terms of regional mechanisms, the Council of Europe Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence (the Istanbul Convention), which BiH ratified as well, is the most far reaching international treaty to tackle VAWG. It aims at zero tolerance for VAWG through preventing violence, protecting survivors, and prosecuting the perpetrators. It also seeks to change perceptions on VAWG by calling on all members of society, in particular men and boys, to change their attitudes. It reaffirms that VAWG is deeply rooted in the inequality between women and men in society and is perpetuated by a culture of intolerance and denial.

In February 2017, UN Women started a three-year regional programme titled "Ending violence against women in the Western Balkan Countries and Turkey: Implementing Norms, Changing Minds", funded by the European Union (EU), with a focus on three main areas of intervention: (1) Working on the adoption of frameworks addressing gender-based discrimination and VAW, aligned with international normative standards as enshrined in CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention, as well as the EU "acquis communautaire", is crucial to address impunity, and convey the message that VAW is not tolerated; (2) In order to strengthen prevention, addressing the root and structural causes of gender inequality, and VAW as one of its most pervasive expressions, a transformative change in society and is required, as well as changing communities' beliefs and perceptions on discriminatory gender stereotypes; (3) For the purpose of reinforcing protection and response to VAW, special attention is paid to enhancing availability and access to comprehensive, coordinated, inter-disciplinary, and sustained multi-sectoral services and its demand from the survivors/survivors' side.

The abovementioned programme contributes to the goals and objectives of the BiH Gender Action Plan (2013-2017) and will directly contribute to the implementation of BiH commitments as set in the BiH Framework Strategy for the Implementation of the Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (2015-2018). The programme also builds on UN Women's ongoing work on ending VAWG implemented through the current programme, "Standards and Engagement for Ending Violence against Women and Domestic Violence in Bosnia and Herzegovina", generously supported by the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency (Sida) in the period from March 2016 to February 2019.

II. Objective of the Support

The project will contribute to the achievement of the Programme “Ending violence against women and girls: Implementing norms, changing minds” (February 2017- January 2018) which aims at ending gender-based discrimination and VAWG, with a particular focus on the most disadvantaged groups of women, in six Western Balkans countries and Turkey. The programme is anchored in the normative frameworks of CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention, and is also in alignment with EU accession standards. The programme is funded by the European Union within the Instrument for Pre-Accession Assistance (IPA) II. More specifically, the project will contribute to the programme Specific Objective 3: “To empower women and girls (including those from disadvantaged groups) who have experienced discrimination or violence to advocate for and use available, accessible and quality services.”

CEDAW Concluding Observations for BiH from 2013 reiterated the need to provide adequate assistance and protection to women survivors of all forms of violence, including by supporting existing shelters and by enhancing cooperation with and funding for non-governmental organizations providing shelter and rehabilitation to survivors. Furthermore, it is imperative that those institutions directly involved in the response to cases of VAWG collect and manage statistics on domestic violence, with data disaggregated by sex, age and relationship to the perpetrator.

According to UN Women baseline data on the accessibility and availability of support services for women and girls subjected to gender-based violence in the region, concerning existing services and normative frameworks against the standards set by the Istanbul Convention, several priorities are reputed in terms of service provision improvement. These include ensuring government funding for the engagement of specialist and expert staff, as well as for running costs of existing specialist support services (shelters, telephone helplines), and improving the system towards a compatible and unified means of collection and analysis of data on survivors of VAWG and domestic violence. In addition, there is evident lack of awareness on the part of service providers when it comes to diversity and a lack of specific programmes and approaches for disadvantaged groups.

Furthermore, potential interventions should base their approaches in the United Nations Joint Global Program on Essential Services for Women and Girls Subject to Violence, which aims to identify the minimum standards to be provided by the health, social services, police and justice sectors as well as guidelines for the coordination and implementation of essential services and the governance of coordination processes and mechanisms.

III. Scope of the Project

The programme builds on the strong links of UN Women and the EU with women civil society organizations (CSOs) in the region, placing the programme in a strategic position to assist women in their drive for rights as citizens. CSOs, in particular women's organizations, play a crucial role in the promotion of gender equality and women's rights. They are key advocacy stakeholders in terms of moving governments from commitment to implementation in relation to international normative standards. They are also key stakeholders in the provision of services that are essential in the establishment of multi-sectoral and coordinated mechanisms to adequately respond to the needs of survivors of violence. Furthermore, women's organizations are key stakeholders in ensuring that the perspectives and voices of the most excluded and discriminated-against groups of women are heard by policy makers. Additionally, women's organizations are instrumental - in terms of their networks, outreach and innovation - to facilitating the required behavioural and attitudinal changes for tackling the structural barriers to gender equality and ending violence against women.

UN Women Country Office in BiH is seeking to engage networks of women's organizations and platforms of women belonging to disadvantaged groups and/or organizations working on women's rights issues that will contribute to achieving the following results:

1. Providers of general and specialist support services for survivors of all forms of violence have the capacity to implement the standards enshrined in CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention
2. Better access to and improved service provision for women from minority or disadvantaged groups

Civil society organizations, with expertise and proven experience in working in service provision to survivors of VAW and domestic violence, referral mechanisms and multi-sectoral coordination, are invited to submit proposals, individually or jointly with other organizations, to design and implement a project that will address the gaps in the quality and accessibility of services for survivors. Implementing partners are invited to submit their proposals targeting any of the levels of government in BiH, with the main focus on entity, cantonal/regional and local level. Under this component two different project proposals will be supported.

IV. Proposed and Expected Results

In order to contribute to achieving the Result 3.1 - Providers of general and specialist support services for victims of all forms of violence have the capacity to implement the standards enshrined in CEDAW and the Istanbul Convention, proposals should focus on the following areas of work:
