The three main sectors involving women entrepreneurs are agriculture, tourism, and manufacturing. They face many challenges pertaining to the impact of gender norms; patriarchal practices influence the position of women in enterprise development and restrict their access to opportunities, resources, and power. Their unequal access to productive resources makes them less influential and keeps them economically marginalized and hidden in value chains. Furthermore, they are not covered by basic social, pension and health services. This informal work increases job insecurity, social exclusion, and economic dependence. Women have limited access to credit and subsidy schemes in rural areas, due in part to requirements they cannot meet, like taxpayer identification numbers and land titles. Lack of financial literacy poses challenges for them to deal with the bureaucracy and necessary paperwork for loans and support.

Inadequate dialogue between the Ministry of Economy and relevant non-government organisations (NGOs) for women’s entrepreneurship prevents exchanges of experience and identifying policy bottlenecks that inhibit women’s broader participation in entrepreneurship. Lastly, the agricultural sectors of the Balkan countries compete against each other and impede progress towards regional economic integration. In general, a lack of political will for regional cooperation, unfair competition, and non-tariff barriers are constraints to the private sector and entrepreneurship.
Although more than half of women in Albania are employed in agriculture, only six percent of farms are managed by women. Critical data gaps limit monitoring of women entrepreneurship in Albania, especially in marginalised groups including elders, rural populations, persons with disability, and migrants. The credit registry data of the Bank of Albania show that the number of women taking loans is almost half the number of men, as is the average amount of loan taken by women compared to men. Data on gender differences in digital skills among Albania's population is also unavailable, along with comprehensive studies on STEM- and ICT-related gendered employment, including in digital entrepreneurship, where women remain under-represented. However, the private sector in Albania is increasingly committing to acting for gender equality: 11 companies have signed the Women's Empowerment Principles since November 2016.

Impact of COVID-19 on women entrepreneurs

Albania was hard hit by the consequences of the 2019 earthquakes and COVID-19 in 2020. The impact is expected to be long-lasting for the Albanian business sector, particularly for women-run business. The biggest losses in income for women and men were those generated from remittances, family businesses and farming. According to a UN Women study on the impact of COVID-19, as women's economic security was shaken, their share of unpaid care and domestic work increased: 76 percent of women reported increased time spent on unpaid domestic work, compared to 66 percent for men. Women's psychological and mental health was more affected and they experienced more challenges seeking health services.

Opportunities for women entrepreneurs

The Government of Albania renewed the Social Enterprises Fund in the new Medium-Term Budget Planning (MTBP) 2021-2023, which ensures continuity and provides an opportunity for more women to benefit from the fund. A budget rebalance in response to COVID-19 will increase agricultural subsidies. As part of the European Union accession journey, the EU’s financing window for Pre-accession Assistance (IPA) III for 2021–2027 is expected to increase funding to the Western Balkans. Focus will be placed on women’s employment in sustainable development programmes, especially in the fields of agriculture and rural development. The World Bank 2019 loan of USD 10 million for Albania will also create opportunities for women to access income-generating activities. Lastly, a new system for access to finance and the formalisation of women-owned enterprises in the informal sector could significantly advance women entrepreneurs.
